

Broward Sheriffs Office joins Pompano Beach High School to help feed the homeless

The Broward Sheriff's Office along with Pompano Beach High School came together to help the less fortunate. The Black Student Union at Pompano Beach High School wanted to do something meaningful in their community and came up with the idea of sponsoring a food drive. Broward Partnership Pompano Beach Center was a great fit as they are an active homeless shelter and are always in need of assistance. A group of teachers at PBHS work with the Broward Sheriff's Office in a group called Operation Establish Trust that gets together every Thursday via Zoom for the last two years to discuss ideas on how the Broward Sheriff's Office can work within the community to ensure a better relationship after the George Floyd incident. The teachers at Pompano Beach High School decided to challenge BSO to see who could raise more food during the drive. BSO accepted the challenge. Yesterday, after three weeks of raising food, BSO came to PBHS with a trailer full of food. It was a great thrill for all of the students at PBHS as the officers came with their sirens blazing and their lights going off during the student's lunch period. The officers worked with the students to load up the food that was raised at PBHS onto a trailer and BSO was happy to deliver the items to the shelter. Although BSO did bring in more items during the food drive, nobody was a loser in the challenge. It was a great experience for all involved and the real winner was the homeless shelter.
